“ Alex was my mom’s boyfriend, he treated me like his own daughter since day 1 when he was with my mom and moved in small apartment while my sophomore year (2008), he amazing stepdad to me, (I will not replace him as ‘stepdad’ because he will always number one best stepdad i asked for) he did good at gesture to communication with me because I am deaf, when I found out this I really so wrecked down, wish I did get see him even hard believe he gone that soon.

Miss you, stepdad!. Fly high, read Stephen King books there in heaven, and I love you (in sign language) ☐

“ To Kim and the children of Alex
Though God has spoken here on earth, the He and the Angels are rejoicing in heaven. Alex was like having another son. Him and Ray grew up together, got in trouble together. They had so much fun together and got in tons of trouble together too! They always kept you laughing, even when you didn't know what you were laughing about. Heaven has a great comedy team to keep the Angels and other family members entertained. I will miss them both, but the memories those rascals left behind will always bring a smile to my face. And On That Great Day, we will all celebrate, laugh and love seeing and receiving the love from our heavenly Father!! What a day of rejoicing!
