“ Mr. Stull (you know I could never call you Artie), it is going to be so hard to put these words into print, as I am still in shock that you are not going to be there to return my texts. When I first met you, I believe you were somewhere between denial/isolation & anger in the stages of grief b/c you were shut up in that cave of a living room & the first words you said to me were, "don't knock, just come in the door!!!!". My first thoughts, I am going to get that man up & out of that bed to live out the rest of his life & I am going to win him over! I not only won both battles, I also gained an unlikely friend in an "old man" ;). You rose to all my challenges & not only got out of that bed, you met me out for lunch & dinner & a much deserved margarita & how happy I was to see you putting down 129th St in your electric wheelchair, picking up balls along the golf course & beaming with pride over your collection the next time I saw you. To your kids: I am so sorry for your loss. All he talked about was how proud of you he was & lectured me to capture & cherish every moment with mine, that I could. He was so proud of you all!
