“ Like some others in here, I've known Dalton for a couple of years through the games we played together. We argued fiercely at some points, and that was probably my fault. But he always circled around to fix the problem. That didn't mean he was relenting on his position. But I learned over time that, that was exactly why I respected him at all. We discussed Christianity a few times in the past couple of months, and he was simply a great person to bounce ideas off of, as I am always growing in my faith. He will be missed. By all accounts, from my perspective, he was a good person.

“ I met Dalton in 2019 online on PUBG mobile when he was still taking EMT classes, and I was in college. His username was "Eli" so it was pretty funny when he revealed his name was Dalton, I guess he just liked how Eli sounded. We used to play a ton, almost every day, and there were so many memories. He was never toxic and handed out compliments and positive energy to everyone. Even if I crashed the squad's car into a wall and got us all killed (losing points we spent the last hour grinding for) he'd take a deep breath and laugh about it xD

After both of us moved onto other games we still kept in touch on Instagram now and then. And now this...I wish I messaged him more recently just to ask how he was doing or catch up on things. I saw his Facebook posts/pictures and assumed things were going normal as usual. He was just a really goofy larger-than-life guy and it's hard to comprehend that this is the end, that I can't message him anymore or share dumb memes.

That being said, he was a righteous person and I hope and pray he is forgiven for any of his sins and granted the highest level of paradise for his good deeds. I remember back then we had some religious debates (him being Christian, me a Muslim) and we always found common ground in our beliefs and how to treat other people. So this really isn't the end, in that sense, because this life is just a test for the next one, and I'm sure he passed with flying colors.

Thank you for your kindness--I will make sure to keep you in my duas (prayers)

“ I went to Oklahoma Christian with Dalton and we played a lot of League of Legends together! He always played Warwick in our group. The character would jump onto the enemy and lock them down and he would always pretend to do that at school and jump out of somewhere onto my back. I didn't realize how much of a core memory that would end up being. Dalton was a lot of fun to hang out around. We talked later in life when I started in Fire/EMS and shared out stories about that. Reading the other stories, it seems like we all knew the same Dalton. Rest easy buddy, I will never forget our dorky times together.

“ Dalton graced our musical journey for several years, leaving an indelible mark on us. A devoted and exceptionally talented musician, his presence illuminated our performances. Yearly band events became cherished reunions, each moment a testament to Dalton's enduring kindness. His legacy as a musician and a friend will forever resonate with Stephanie, Daniela, Shelby & Elizabeth, and all who had the privilege of sharing the stage with him. -From Broken Arrow Clarinets Class of 2011

“ I've known Dalton a couple years now and Dalton was one of the nicest guys I've met. It's such a tragedy we lost him so early. However with the short time he was here he left big impacts on the lives on those he encountered. He had a big heart and an intuitive sense of how people were doing. He would always ask how you were if he sensed anything off and would sit and talk with you for however long you needed. He cared about people. He also has a great sense of humor and we would joke and laugh all the time. I'm going to miss him. My condolences to his family and friends. RIP bro, till we meet again

“ I'm just another one of his gaming buddies. Dalton (Shamu as we knew him) was an always glass half full kinda guy. He saw the best in everyone. The nightly chats gonna feel kinda empty without ya. Rest in peace man and I hope your other family and friends can feel your presence as you watch over them.

“ I've been gaming with Dalton (Shamu in-game name) for a few years now and I am going to miss his big heart. He's truly come across as a genuinely good man and had a lot of aspirations in his life as he would ask me about certain things he's working on and is interested in. I tried to guide him many different instances to go for it and chase his dreams the best way possible. I am going to miss gaming with him and also movie streams which we enjoyed seeing certain movies as a group together, his funny and insightful comments were always welcome. I will miss my time not only gaming with him but our little talks about life together. He will truly be missed. My condolences to the family and RIP Dalton.

“ Dalton (Shamu),

It's been a couple of years now that I have known you through an online game that we call Conquerors Blade. Eventually, those endless nights of talking about how our lives have been up til now feel long and short at the same time. We had our ups and downs pursuing our goals in the game and real life. It feels as if we can go on and on about it without needing to worry because we had a good group of friends we hung out with online. But life had other plans for you.

Those conversations we had will always resonate with me. You were always supportive and took the initiative in terms of wanting to do something right or being helpful in many situations. A man like you with that kind of demeanor only comes around in this world once in a while and I will never forget you for it. Although game communities aren't as upright as they should be, especially with gamers in modern times are more of the negative side of social norms. You held your resilience with your principles to be recognized for who you are towards those bad crowds and kept strong about it.

I was shocked that you would always say that you looked up to me and or say that you'd appreciate me for always helping you both in the game and your real-life situations. During those times yes. I was your Commander and eventually, I was your Liege, but aside from the title or ranking I didn't help you because of that in-game social norm. It's because you are my friend. And that kind of stuff didn't sit well with me because I recognized you as my friend and not some extra player I got into our guild(house).

Dalton, you will forever be missed. But our memories of you will last forever.

To your friends and family my condolences to all of you. We truly lost a good man.

Dalton, this is goodbye for now but please watch over everyone you care about like you always would. Rise Above Mortality [RAM] my friend the guild will forever miss you. And I will miss you always my friend.

“Dalton, or Shamu as we knew him. It took me a few days to really sit and think about what to say. You had the kindest soul. You always checked in on people, cared for people and listened to people.

I spent many hours talking to you about real life situations. When I told you we found out my son has autism you immediately started doing research and sending me websites about how to help him. Whenever you heard him yelling or laughing while on discord you always said how much you loved hearing him.

To daltons family. He was one of the kindest, most thoughtful people I know. Although I cannot fathom the grief and pain that his passing has caused you. I hope you take comfort in knowing you raised a man who loved well, who gave freely and who never asked for things in return.

Sham, I'm going to miss you man. Rest easy and I hope those pearly gates are as beautiful as you pictured them.

“ Dalton I have been playing games for 2 years now, with a heavy heart I know you were one of the many I can call a good friend even if our time together was short, I just can't believe that you are gone. You were one of the many that had always had good intentions with people. It's hard to say goodbye, but I can tell you that the memories we shared with everyone will resonate with everyone and we will make sure your memories will never be forgotten. Rest in peace old friend.

“ Dalton was a cool dude, although he drove me near to driving my forehead through the drywall once or twice he was a long time friend of mine and the sort of person I would term as a 'resident of Gooberville', home of all goobers. I've got a lot of pleasant memories of late nights with him, and he was a member of our online community for quite a long time.

To the family, I want to thank you for providing me with a peer and a friend. To the parents, you raised a good man, and though a death is tragic I hope you feel some pride in the life he lived. He was well liked, respected, and I am certain that years down the road I'll still remember him for who he was given his brief but appreciated impact on my life.

We're definitely going to miss him, but I think it's less goodbye and 'see you later'. It was an honor to know you, and to be called a degenerate when I was up at 3AM, but so was he.

With more respect than can be possibly communicated in text, thank you.
