“ Funny how I miss you more now than when you first passed. Not a day goes by that I don't think of you bubby. I listen to your voice mail every night just to catch up with you.

“ I met Jamie through my husband who initially knew Jamie at work, but quickly became friends. Mike (my husband) would come home and tell things Jamie had said, he would be impressed with Jamies wittiness, vast knowledge of things outside work. Mike would often say that Jamie would be the perfect Trivial Pursuit partner! I got to know Jamie a little bit on my own. We shared several things, our love of the Royals and some personal past and current life situations. He talked about his pride for his daughter. What he did not talk about was his physical pain. However, my husband talked about Jamie's real physical pain. I am so sorry he suffered as he did. We would text humus and serious subjects. I mourn his loss. I take comfort in the fact that Jamie reached out for a relationship with Jesus. I regret the missed opportunities to know him better. I am thankful for the relationship he had with my husband.

“ When I transplanted to Caney in the 6th grade, Jamie was a fast friend. He made me laugh and laughter at school helped me transition. In Jr high, those were fun times. He was quick witted and made effortless observations. In high school, who didn't think of Jamie as a close friend? He will be missed for a time on this side . He will be a future highlight in heaven. Until then, my friend.

“ Jamie jamie jamie....he would say Mollie Mollie Mollie....you beat me to it...heaven is real and the Lord called you home...you were always great comic relief in school...I'm glad we texted a few months ago...I'm still mad that you won president of our Senior class against me and didn't even campaign! Not really, I voted for you too! God Bless and i pray for peace to your classmates, friends and family.
