How do you sum up the existence of a man with a larger than life personality? Walter Harrison Harlow lived a full and usually opinionated life; Dad loved his family and country and spent a great deal of time travelling throughout the United States constructing electrical substations. Everyone that encountered him knew he could be stubborn and loud while living the life he enjoyed. All that knew him loved him. Dad looked and sounded gruff and stern but Barbara, his companion of 15 years, would say that he was just a big ole teddy bear. Dad found a way to succeed in all situations, he even managed to avoid his biggest irritation if life, Obamacare. Rest in peace Dad and don't be too hard on the Angels. We love you and will miss you dearly!

Mr. Harlow is survived by his companion Barbara Leverich of Bartlesville, Oklahoma, by his two daughters Shady Jean Conklin and her husband Thomas of Corsicana, Texas, and by Teresa Leigh Cox and her husband Robert J. Scott of Morrison, Colorado, and by a son Robert Harlow and wife Elsie of Aurora, Colorado, by two sisters Mrs. Elizabeth Farmer of Greer, South Carolina, and Mrs. Sheri Martin of Skiatook, Oklahoma and by seven grandchildren and five great grandchildren. He was preceded in death by his parents Jack H. and Juanita I. Harlow.

“ Just found out today that Walt passed. Tried to call several times last year on trips in and out of the country. Got a message # was not in service and I thought the worst which turned out to be true. He reminded me a lot of my dad. I will always remember two of his stories with his cousin. Getting kicked by a shocked cow and Walt riding his new bike into the side of a chow dog to teach him a lesson. The dog didn't chase anyone anymore but it totaled the bike.

“ Walt was a very good friend of mine. We worked together building substations. Stubborn, loud, gruff, opinionated... all qualities I loved about him. The true character of an honest man. You always knew where you stood with him. I shall miss him very much

“ I had the great pleasure of first meeting Walt (we called him "Wally") through work, and I have called him friend ever since. Wally has always been such a hoot! To know Wally is to love him. I was a "young engineer" when I first met Wally. He was a great and patient teacher on the job site. I have often passed along some of his words of wisdom, such as "computers don't build these projects, people do - get off that dang thing!" The man could build a substation! He had my respect and the respect of all that worked with him. I have always had a special place in my heart for him. He will be dearly missed.
